32 DEEPLY FELT

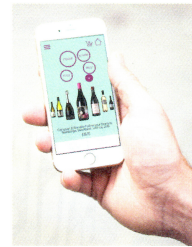

There's a reason Scandinavians love felt homewares: few materials are quite as tactile, or offer such powerful insulating and sound-buffering qualities. San Francisco felt rug specialist Peace Industry has teamed up with California pottery Heath Ceramics to create a modern collection of felt rugs, storage baskets and ottomans. Handmade from lambswool at Peace Industry's workshop in Iran, they will take you through winter in style. 'Slice' rug, £1,612; 'Choob' ottomans, £540 each; basket, £282 (heathceramics.com).

33 GOURMET TO GO

If things get busy over the Christmas period, worry not: the takeaway has had an upgrade. JKS Restaurants, the group behind the critically acclaimed Gymkhana, Trishna and Hoppers, has launched a London-based home delivery service called Motu Indian Kitchen (motuindiankitchen.com). It offers an à la carte menu, but we like the feast box – a fragrant main course plus kachumber raita, homemade naan and chutneys.

Wine is taken care of, too, thanks to Covent Garden bistro 10 Cases' new wine-delivery app, Drop. The electric bike service carefully chosen bottles of vino to anywhere in zones 1 or 2. The reasoning behind the launch? 'People are taking a greater interest in what they're drinking, but don't want to spend a fortune or waste money on hangover-inducing wine from the corner shop,' says co-founder Will Palmer. Hear, hear! With no minimum order, you can have a chilled bottle of Riesling delivered pronto (dropwine.co.uk).

34 THREE OF THE BEST MODERN STOVES

Traditional warmth with a contemporary design twist

Best for colour
Zanussi's 'Anna' stove features ceramic cladding, and a remote-controlled stoking system (zannuzetti.it).

Best for street cred
British brand Charnwood's 'Cove 1' stove recently made an appearance as part of an art installation at White Cube gallery in London. £1,218 (charnwood.com).

Best for cosy corners
The '6643' stove by Danish brand Morso has an elliptical shape that makes it perfect for corner spaces and a 180-degree window for a wide view of the flames. £1,890 (morso.co.uk).
